

The Journal of the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law

The Journal, published by the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law, is intended to be a forum for the exchange of multidisciplinary ideas. Manuscripts are welcomed that deal with the interfaces of psychiatry and the legal system and the theory and practice of forensic psychiatry. Content includes correctional psychiatry, psychiatric evaluation of individuals involved with the criminal or civil legal system, ethics, the philosophy of law, legal regulation of psychiatric practice, education and training in the field, and research into causes and treatment of behavioral problems that manifest themselves particularly in individuals who are in contact with the legal system.

All content represents the opinions of the authors and not those of the editors. Except where specifically stated, published articles are not official statements of the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law.

Authors are presumed to acquire knowledge and expertise from their experience, which informs their scholarly work. Articles are accepted on the basis of editorial judgments on the authors' areas of expertise, interest in the topic, and peer review. Author declarations on matters related to employment, consultation, or prior publication are published when the editors determine that this information is important in judging the manuscript.

Definitions of Journal Sections:

Editorial

An editorial is an informed opinion on a current topic in forensic psychiatry. Length of text is 2,000–3,700 words, excluding tables, figures, and references. An abstract is not required. An editorial represents the opinion of the author and does not represent opinions or statements of AAPL or The Journal Editors or Editorial Board. Editorials do not undergo blind peer review, but are reviewed internally by editorial staff. Proposals for editorials should be discussed with the Editor.

Biography

A biography highlights an individual who has made sustained important contributions to psychiatry and the law in any country. Length should not exceed 3,700 words, excluding tables, figures, and references. Proposals for biography should be discussed with the Editor. Biographies do not undergo blind peer review, but are reviewed internally by editorial staff. An abstract is not required.

Regular Article

A regular article is original scholarship in psychiatry and the law. Length should not exceed 6,000 words, excluding the abstract, tables, figures, and references. Regular articles undergo blind peer review. An abstract of no more than 200 words is required.

The Journal is committed to thoughtful and respectful analysis of matters printed in The Journal. Such analysis enhances the educational mission of The Journal. At the Editor's discretion, some of the Regular Articles appearing in The Journal may be chosen as the subject for commentary by other scholars. Commentators are chosen for their interest and expertise in the topic of the designated article. Generally, authors will be informed in advance of printing that their work will be the subject of a commentary. These authors are invited to respond to the commentaries through Letters to the Editor.

Analysis and Commentary

An article published in the Analysis and Commentary Section reviews the literature on a particular topic and summarizes the differing views on that topic. The author also offers expert commentary on the topic. Length should not exceed 5,000 words, excluding the abstract, tables, figures, and references. Starting with Volume 40, #2, Analysis and Commentary articles undergo blind peer review. Prior to Volume 40, #2, Analysis and Commentary articles were reviewed internally by editorial staff. An abstract of no more than 200 words is required.

Reflections and Narratives

Articles published in this department are narrative accounts of personal experience, fiction, or poetry by individuals engaged in the practice or process of psychiatry and the law, written in either the first or third person, offering thoughtful reflections on professional life. Length should not exceed 5,000 words, excluding tables, figures, and references. Articles submitted to Reflections and Narratives do not undergo blind peer review but are reviewed internally by editorial staff. An abstract is not required.

Legal Digest

Legal Digest articles are written by forensic trainees in accredited programs. The cases are assigned to programs by the Legal Digest Editor. The program director or other designated forensic faculty member assumes responsibility for the submission process and for approving the content of the submitted reviews. Programs wishing to participate in Legal Digest may contact the Legal Digest Editor.

Books and Media

Book reviews are assigned by the Book Review Editor. Those wishing to submit a review of other media should contact the Journal Coordinator. Reviews generally should not exceed 1,000 words. A reviewer who believes a particular book or media subject warrants a more in-depth review should contact the Book Review Editor, who may approve a longer review of up to 3,000 words.

Letters to the Editor

Length should not exceed 500 words, excluding references. Up to five references may be included. An abstract is not required. Letters to the Editor do not undergo blind peer review but are reviewed internally by editorial staff. Letters to the Editor should be in response to subject matter printed in The Journal.

Instructions for Authors

Manuscripts are considered for publication with the understanding that their essential substance has not been published previously and has not been submitted simultaneously to other publications.

All inquiries, correspondence, and submissions should be directed to the Journal Coordinator. The Journal Editorial Office address is: One Regency Drive, P.O. Box 30, Bloomfield, CT 06002. The Journal Coordinator is Sara Elsdén (Tel. 800-331-1389; e-mail: selsden@ssmgt.com).

The Journal is committed to thoughtful and respectful analysis of matters printed in The Journal. Such analysis enhances the educational mission of The Journal. At the Editor's discretion, some of the Regular Articles appearing in The Journal may be chosen as the subject for commentary by other scholars. Commentators are chosen for their interest and expertise in the topic of the designated article. Generally, authors will be informed in advance of printing that their work will be the subject of a commentary. These authors are invited to respond to the commentaries through Letters to the Editor.

Respect for Persons

The Journal's commitment to respect for persons is reflected in the use of person-first language, e.g. "person with mental illness"; "person diagnosed with [disorder]." Expressions such as "victim of [disorder]," "suffer from [disorder]," or "the mentally ill" are not used as they are perceived of as stigmatizing. Editors reserve the right to make minor edits to conform to this practice. Authors are hereby notified that their submissions may be returned for revision before peer review for correction of such language.

Ethics in Research

For investigations involving human or animal subjects, the authors must state in the Methods section that an appropriate institutional review board (IRB) approved the project or exempted the project from review. A copy of the IRB letter should accompany the manuscript. Authors without access to an IRB are encouraged to discuss alternatives with the Editor. The Methods section should also describe the manner in which informed consent was obtained from the subjects.

Case Reports

The Journal's concern for respect for persons extends to individuals' right to the privacy of their life stories. The authors' interests, and even the readers' potential interest in a case, must be balanced against the weight of the subject's interests and The Journal's interest in demonstrating respect for all subjects' privacy and dignity. Case reports will be considered only if they are: central to the scholarly endeavor of the article; illustrate important dimensions of the discussion; and are submitted with the written informed consent of the subject(s), are in the public domain, or do not divulge data that would identify the subject(s) to others. Composite or fictionalized case reports will be identified as such in the manuscript and the editors will discuss the applicability of these requirements with the authors.

Technical Requirements

Include the address, phone number, fax number, and e-mail address of the corresponding author on all manuscripts. Submission should be by email with the manuscript attached. Submission is not considered complete until the Journal office receives the signed Statement of Authorship Responsibility (form printed below) and, for each figure, a TIF or EPS file of acceptable reproduction quality (at least 300 dpi resolution).

Manuscripts should be submitted in the following order:

1. Title page: Title; author(s) (first name, middle initial, surname, and degrees). Title page should also include all author position titles and affiliations; grant acknowledgment (if applicable); where presented (if applicable); any necessary disclaimers (e.g., "The views expressed in this article do not necessarily reflect the official DVA policy"); and address for correspondence, including email address (required).

Titles over 100 characters will be edited. Subheads within articles must fit on one line (max X characters). Editors reserve the right to change titles and subheads that do not meet these criteria.

2. Abstract: when required, one-paragraph summary of 200 words or less

3. Text

4. Acknowledgments (if any)

5. Appendix or Addendum (if any)

6. References should be numbered consecutively with Arabic numerals as they appear in the text (number each source citation as a separate item; but the same reference number may be cited more than once in the text). In general, the style for references, tables, and figures should conform to the specific reference formats listed in the next section. When quotations are included in text, the specific page number of the reference must be given. References are limited to citations. The Journal style precludes the use of footnotes or endnotes.

7. Figure legends should be numbered with Arabic numbers in order of appearance in the text.

8. Tables should be numbered with Arabic numbers in order of appearance in the text.

Statement of Authorship Responsibility, Financial and Other Disclosures, Protection of Research Subjects, and Transfer of Copyright

Each author and co-author is required to sign the following statement and include it with the initial manuscript submission.

1. The author and co-authors warrant that the manuscript titled: _____ is original work, has not been published before, and will not be subsequently published elsewhere without the permission of the Editor and the Publisher.
2. The author and co-authors certify that they have participated sufficiently in the work to take public responsibility for it and that they have met all of the following criteria: (a) conceived and designed the work or analyzed and interpreted the data; (b) drafted the article or reviewed it for intellectual content; and (c) read and approved the final version to be published. They acknowledge that: participation solely in the acquisition of funding or the collection of data does not justify authorship; general supervision of the research group is not sufficient for authorship; department chairpersons who were not involved directly in the study, physicians who referred patients or interpreted routine studies, technicians who supplied routine services, and persons who provided technical help in preparing the paper should not be listed as authors; any part of an article critical to its main conclusions must be the responsibility of at least one author; and the Editor may require the authors to justify the assignment of authorship.
3. The author and co-authors warrant that the work is valid in that it accurately reports the nature of the work's methodology, research, analysis, results, and conclusions.
4. The author and co-authors agree to produce for examination the data on which the manuscript is based, if requested by the Editor.
5. The author and co-authors warrant that they have not, and will not, upload the work to a preprint server.
6. The author and co-authors agree to identify in writing any financial involvement or other potential conflict of interest they may have in relation to the manuscript. (When appropriate, notice of financial disclosure or other potential conflict of interest will be published as part of the article so that the reader may be aware of any possible biases of the author or co-authors.)
I/we have financial involvement in relation to the manuscript. Yes _____ No _____
I/we have other potential conflict(s) of interest in relation to the manuscript. Yes _____ No _____
If yes, I/we have attached a written explanation.
7. The author and co-authors warrant that informed consent to research has been obtained from all research subjects or their authorized surrogates, and is acknowledged in the manuscript.
8. The authors and co-authors warrant the following (check one):
 - (a) _____ The work did not involve the use of human or animal subjects.
 - (b) _____ The work was exempted from review by the appropriate IRB (documentation attached).
 - (c) _____ The work was approved by the appropriate IRB (documentation attached).
9. In any article containing references to personal communications, written approval for publication has been obtained from the quoted source and is retained by the authors.
10. The authors of a Regular Article acknowledge that their submission may be designated by the Editor as the subject for commentary by other scholars.
11. In consideration of The Journal of the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law's taking action in reviewing and editing this submission, the author and co-authors undersigned hereby transfer, assign, or otherwise convey all copyright ownership to the American Academy of Psychiatry and the Law in the event that such work is published in The Journal. (Add additional signature sheets if necessary.)
